

Springer Nature Textbook Policy

Mission Statement

Springer Nature provides free e-textbook samples in order to help instructors select the best textbook for their courses.

The purpose of sampling is simply to get an idea whether the book is suitable for students to use for a course, either in part or in full. For more in-depth reading and course preparation on the part of teaching staff, Springer Nature books can be found through university libraries around the world, either in print or as part of a Springer Nature e-book collection, or in local and online bookstores.

Articles

1. Springer Nature does not approve free copies for all books and reserves the right to limit the format, number of copies and titles any one person or institution may receive.
2. Sample copies are provided first and foremost in e-book format.
3. Instructors and Lecturers are asked to give course/university/teaching information in order to get any free textbooks, complimentary copies or Instructor Services. The instructor or his agent must submit bona fide credentials documenting his status—such as the university web site featuring the instructor, OR a non-student .edu e-mail address, OR a picture identification card, OR a confirmation with official address/emblem from the Academic Department.
4. Forms and instructions for complying with this policy are posted on springer.com and/or springernature.com. Questions can be directed to textbooks@springer.com. Previous forms are no longer accepted and all applicants will be directed to the current online form.
5. This document supersedes all previous policy documents regarding Springer's textbook policy.
