

How do you think decisions are made about the care provided to an infant [grandchild/niece/nephew]?

What contribution do you think you make to this decision making process?

When there are disagreements about what care to provide, who do you think has the final decision making authority?

Does having a male infant makes a difference in decision taken?

Describe your experience of supporting the mother in the care of her newborn infant.

Who primarily guides the mother in caring for her newborn infant?

Where do you think the practice or beliefs about caring for newborn comes from and how does it make you feel?

In which situation(s) do you think mothers find it easy to seek help in caring for their newborn infant and in what situations was it challenging?

Tell me about how you know what the baby wants.
How do you feel about the way in which baby responds to you?

What are some traditional practices mothers are applying to care for your infant?