

Bubble size = Peak area

Figure S1: Adductome maps of rats at 52 weeks. The relative peak areas and the number of peaks are given for each group. There were no significant differences in either peak area or the number of peaks between any of the groups. No adducts specific to any of the treated groups were found.