2. The earthquake events in our study area archived in the USGS and ISC-EHB catalogs

Searching in the global earthquake data banks for the earthquakes within the geographic frame “Longitude degrees 118~123, Latitude degrees 18~23,” which cover the northern Manila trench, we have 3377 earthquakes in the USGS catalog (data available from 1950 to present), and 1378 earthquakes in the ISC-EHB bulletin (data available from 1964~ present). Figure S1 shows the epicentral distribution of these events. These two catalogs illustrate the same seismicity patterns. Figure S1-1 demonstrates the seismicity archived by these two catalogs for the area of the purple rectangular and for the period between July 2005 and December 2006.

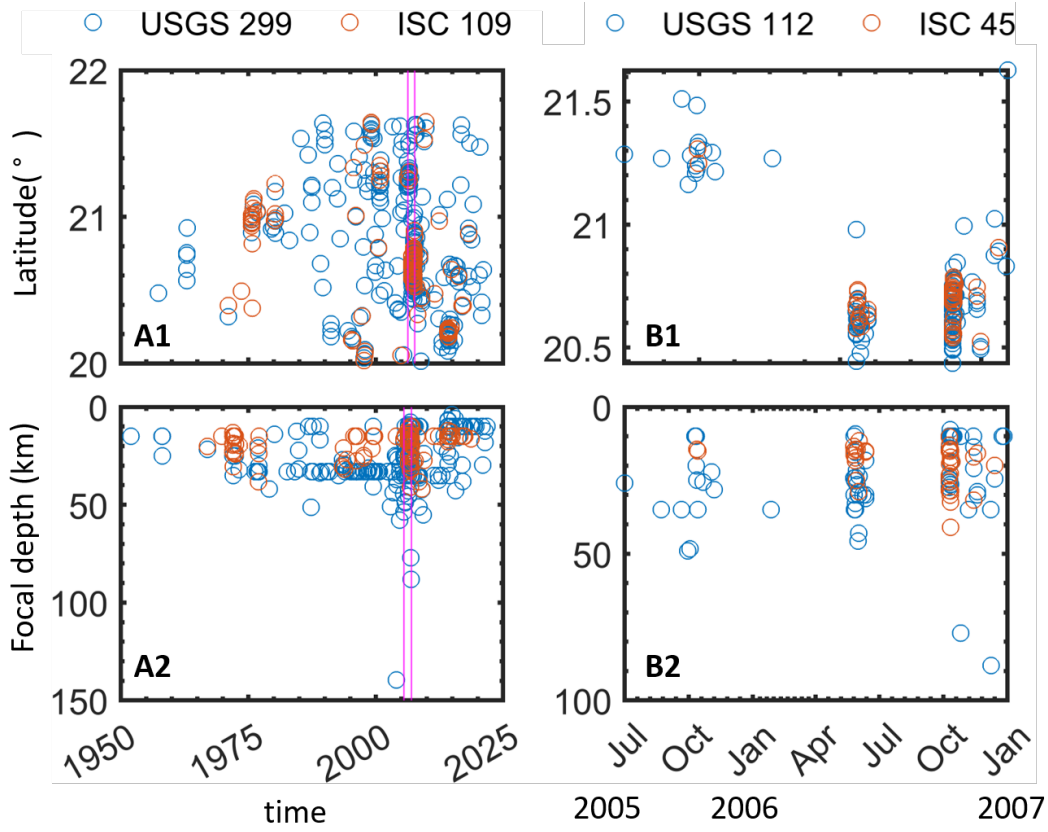

Figure S2. The temporal evolution of the seismicity illustrated by latitude (A1 and B1) and focal depth (A2 and B2) sections. (A1) and (A2): events inside the purple rectangular in Figure S1. (B1) and (B2) events in the period from July 2005 to December 2006. Two pink lines in A1 and A2 indicate the begin and end times for (B1) and (B2).

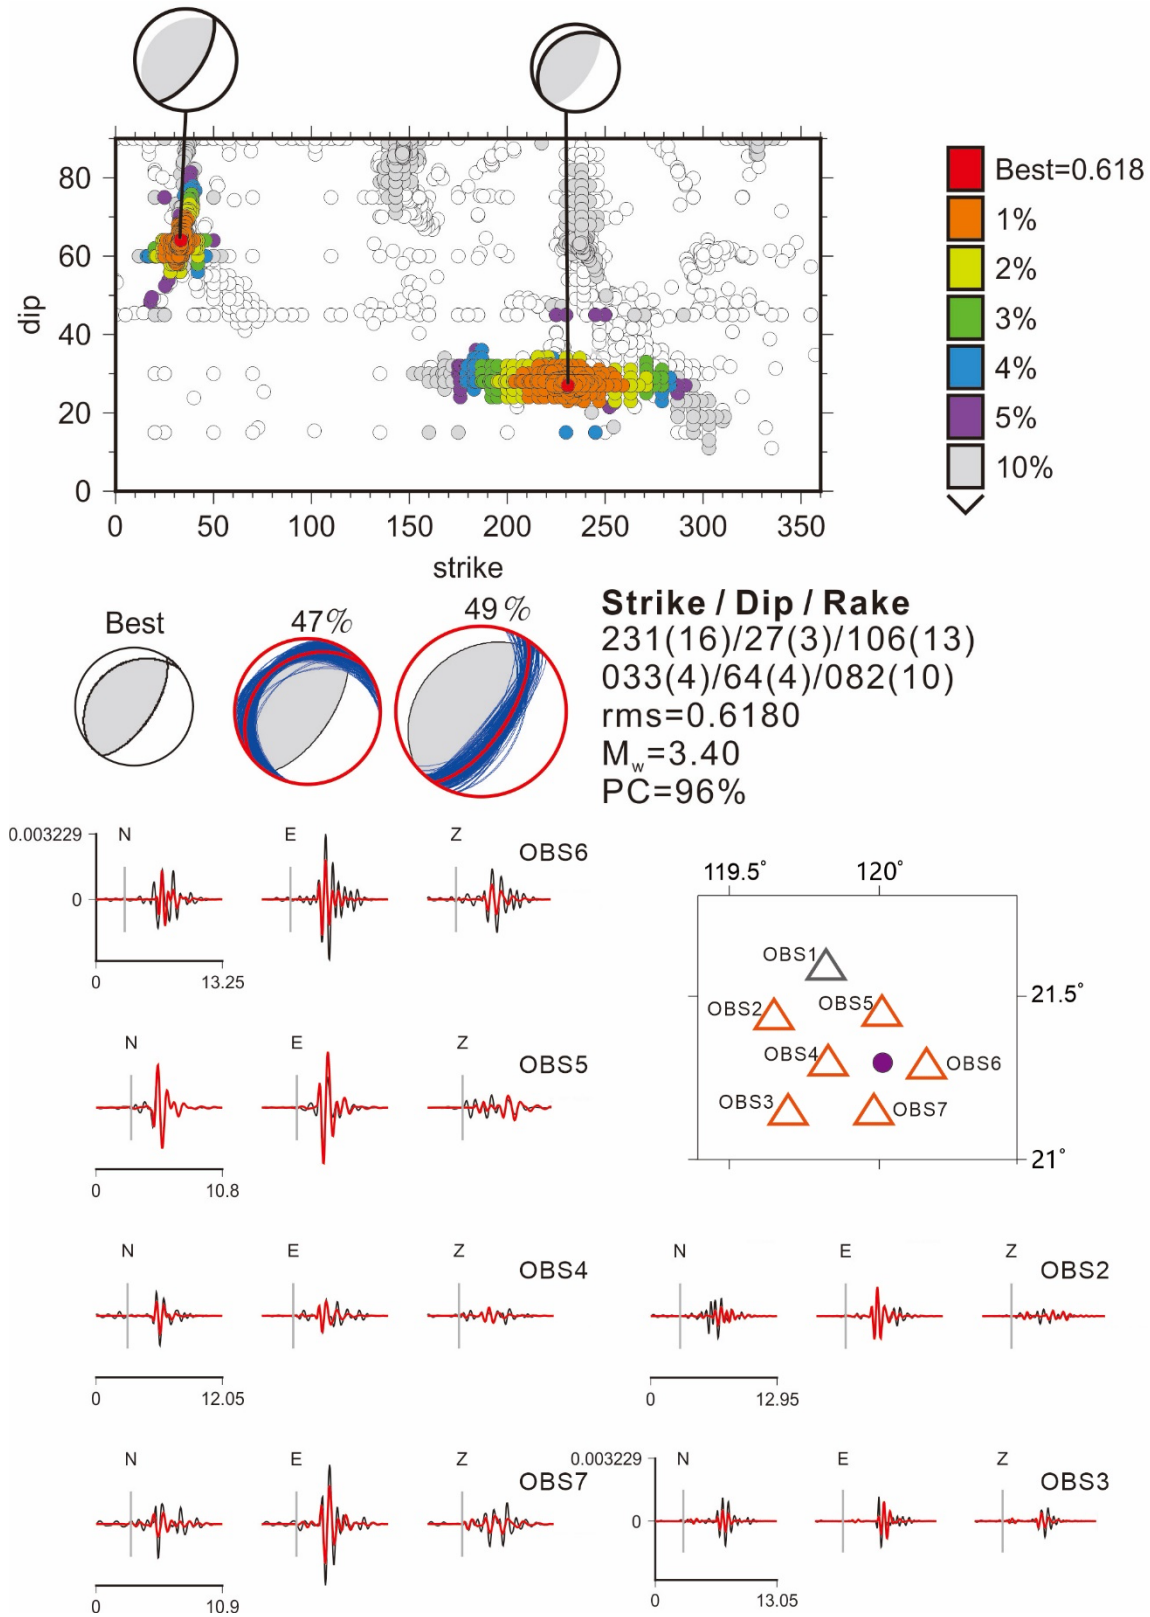

3. Applying the near-field waveform inversion “FMNEAR” to our OBS data

The main text presents the outline for determining the focal mechanism solution with FMNEAR.

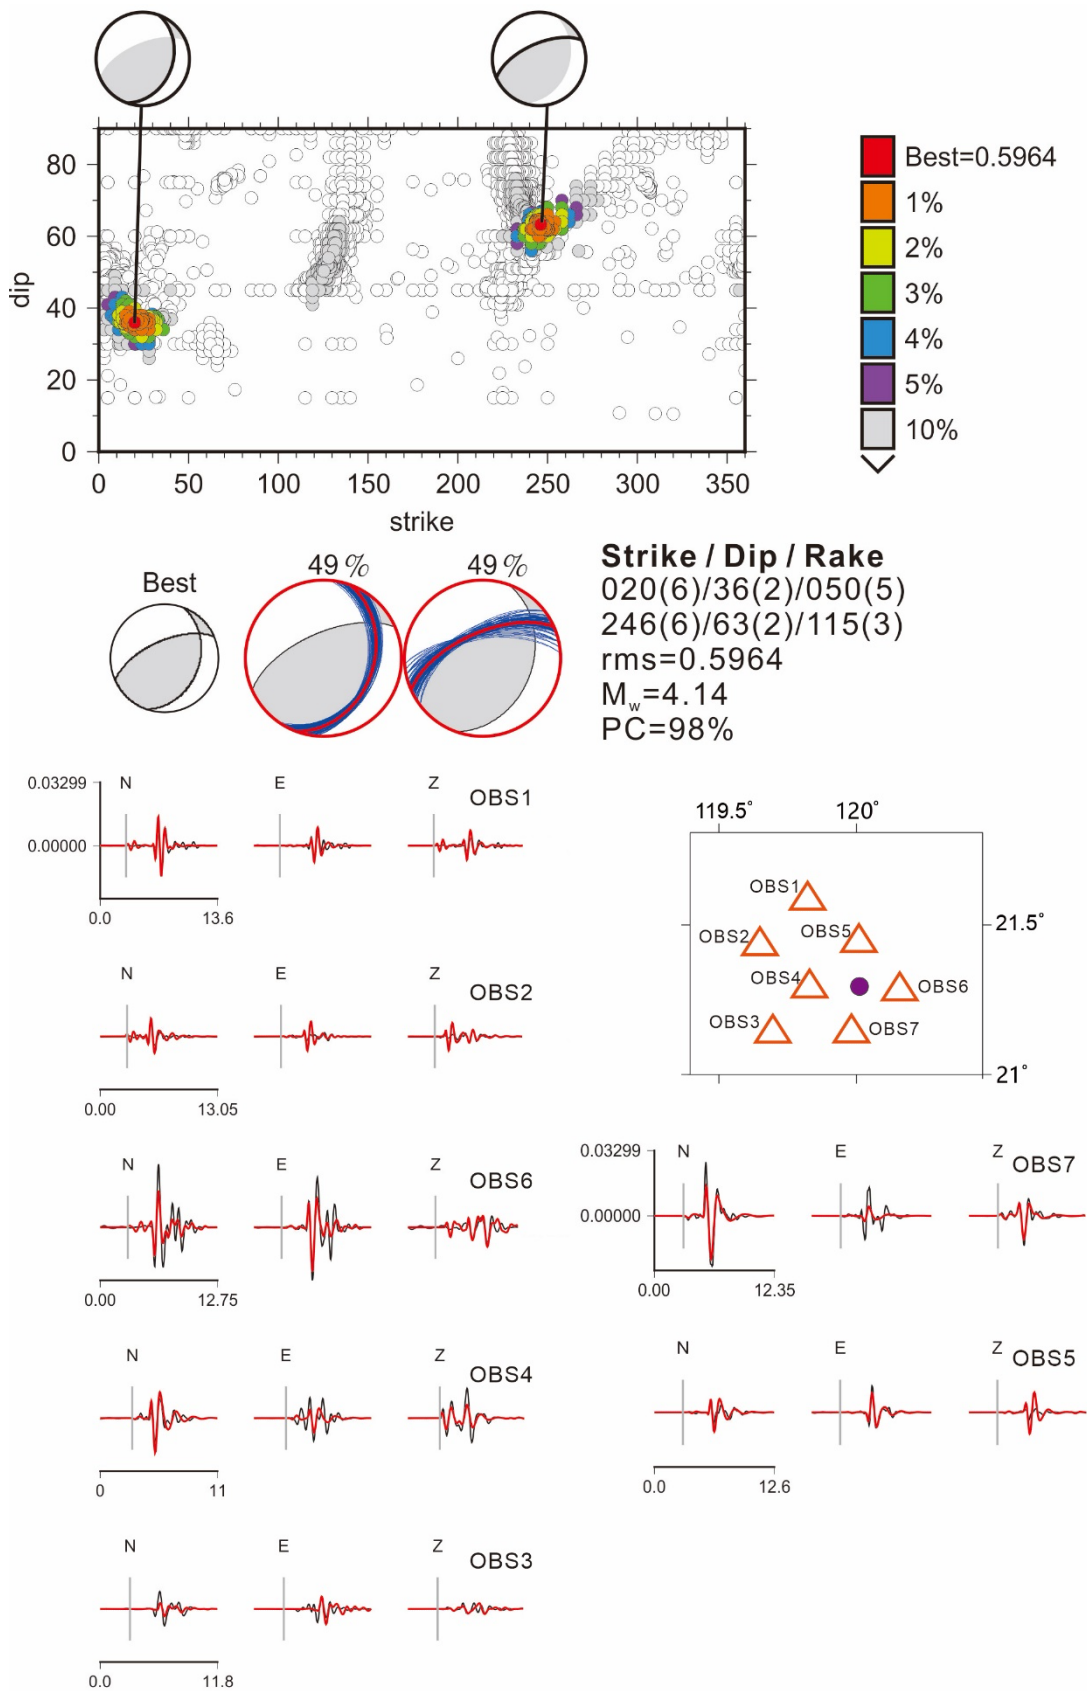

Here we provide another four inversion solutions in our study. The waveform modeling and confidence index (PC: percentage of confidence) are shown to assess the quality of the inversion result. The confidence index is an empirical indicator of the quality and uniqueness of the solution. More information about the confidence index can be found in Delouis (2014).
